CIVIL OFFICIALS AGAIN RULE OKLAHOMA CITY

Scores Surrender Their Lives To Christ At Climax Of Services

Two Great Audiences Hear Evangelist Ham's Sermons

MEN'S SERVICE DRAWS BIG CROWD

Impassioned Plea For Men To Get On Side Of God Is Made

The climax of interest in the evangelistic campaign thus far was reached yesterday when Evangelist Ham spoke to two great audiences with telling effect. At the afternoon service for men only the great tabernacle was well filled with men, who gave rapt attention to the most earnest and searching message the evangelist has delivered in Decatur.

Speaking on the subject "Heroes and Cowards—Men and Melancholies," Mr. Ham earnestly set forth the characteristics of those whom God classifies as heroes and gave an impassioned appeal to the men to take their stand on the side of Jesus Christ. The address was replete with timely messages and frequently the speaker was interrupted by vigorous applause. Scores responded to his appeal at the close of his discourse and several came to the platform and gave brief testimony of their determination to be heroes for God. Dr. Ham announced that he will speak to men only again on next Sunday afternoon on "Adultery" and it is expected that the great tabernacle will not hold the crowd of men who will attend this service.

Last night, the great auditorium was insufficient to seat the great host of eager listeners and many were forced to stand. The song service was unusually inspiring and was featured by a male octette which elicited tumultuous applause. Mr. Ramsey took special collections at both services yesterday which assured the payment of the running expenses of the campaign.

When the evangelist came to the platform he entered at once into his discussion of "The Final Judgment" and spoke vigorously and earnestly for over an hour after which about fifty responded to his call and surrendered their lives to the Master.

Following is a condensed summary of his sermon.

Certain and Unavoidable

The first thing we note about the judgment is the certainty of it. Men may laugh at it now; but they can't laugh away its decrees then. Men laughed at Noah when he gave them God's warning of the coming flood; they laughed at Jeremiah when he warned Israel of her coming captivity; they mocked at Jesus when He told them of the utter and awful destruction that waited Jerusalem. But their laughing and mocking did not prevent the fulfilling of the letter of every one of these divinely inspired warnings.

The second thing, we notice about the judgment is its universality. No man can escape it. Do not exclude yourself with the idea that it is for the wicked only.

Yes, many crimes have never been detected, and many criminals have escaped punishment here through the machinations of a shrewd lawyer or the lies of a witness, but in the day of judgment the truth concerning all things will be blazoned before the world as upon the sky in letters of light.

For What We Are To Be Judged

Third, let us inquire for what we are to be judged. First, for the deeds done in the body.

Second, we shall be judged of the secret things we have done.

All the secret vices you have cast to foist bad men or iniquity upon your town or country are charged to your account and you must answer for them in that day.

Third, you are to be judged for every idle word you have spoken in all your life. Matt. 12:36; Your Blasphemy dirty words, lies, gossip, impure songs you have sung, the evil things you have said against the Bible, against this meeting, against Christ, against preachers.

Fourth, you will be judged for the very thoughts and imaginations of your heart. How can you face these

BOARD RULE OF SCHOOLS HELD LEGAL

The second of the quo warranto proceedings brought in connection with a legal test as to the constitutionality of the Patterson merger bills was terminated before Judge James E. Horton today, the Judge denying the claims of the relators who had questioned as to what authority the city board of education had for exercising authority.

The decision of Judge Horton means that he has upheld the legal rights of the present board of education to hold their offices, just as last week he upheld the right of the city commissioners to hold their offices.

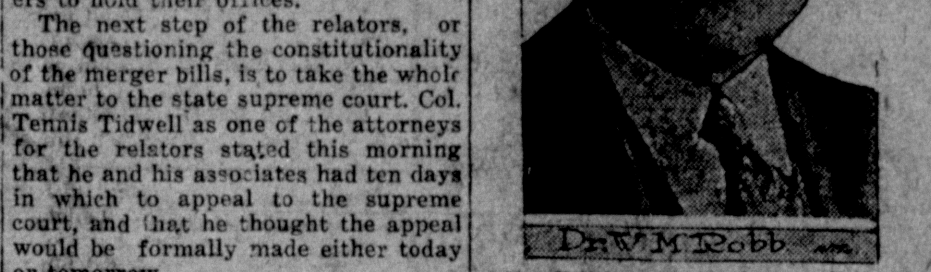

The next step of the relators, or those questioning the constitutionality of the merger bills, is to take the whole matter to the state supreme court. Col. Tammis Tidwell as one of the attorneys for the relators stated this morning that he and his associates had ten days in which to appeal to the supreme court, and that he thought the appeal would be formally made either today or tomorrow.

The meeting today between Judge Horton of the circuit court, and attorney in the quo warranto proceeding brought by relators in connection with the authority of the present school board of Decatur, was entirely of a formal nature, Judge Horton told attorneys Friday that he considered his upholding the Patterson merger bills as constitutional in every detail, a few days ago also upheld the claim of the respondents in the second quo warranto proceedings namely that the board of education was within the law in exercising authority over the city school.

It was not generally known here Saturday that Judge Horton had made his decision concerning the legal status of the three commissioners of Decatur applicable to the five members of the board of education of the city of Decatur.

It was stated by Attorneys A. J. Harris, that but for the fact that a different set of names had to be copied into the agreed statement of facts in the school board case the whole matter would have been terminated Friday. The agreed statement of facts in both the quo warranto proceedings being identical except for the names of the relators and the names of the respondents.

As it would have taken considerable time to insert the proper names, and as Judge Horton was desirous of returning to his home in Athens as early as possible Friday afternoon, it was agreed that the formality of his entering a judgment in favor of the respondents in the second quo warranto proceedings be put off until Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Dr. William M. Robb, a well-known Back Bay (Boston) doctor, is being sought by the State Police in connection with the finding of the dismembered body of a woman in the Merrimack River. Parts of the body were found in two suit cases, though the head has never been found. Similar suit cases are reported to have disappeared from the doctor's office, according to District Attorney Reading, of Boston. The body was identified as that of Mrs. Alice Walschendorf, wife of the proprietor of a Summer resort at East Bridgewater. The identification was made by another doctor, whom she had asked to perform an illegal operation.

HIGHWAY BOARD IS LIVEST ISSUE NOW

"The liveliest issue at the capital for this week" declared Representative John Patterson, who leaves tonight for Montgomery "will be the selection of a highway commission."

A conference committee named in the house and in the senate, is now at work on a plan for the selection of the commission, and this committee is to have a meeting Tuesday.

The original proposal was for three salaried men to compose the commission, as named by Governor Brandon. Later a proposal was made that the ten districts of the state should each have one man on the highway commission, with a chairman of that committee, all named by the Governor; still later it was proposed that the commission be composed of five men, and provides the following arrangements for naming three men who shall constitute the commission. The Governor to send in three names first, and from these three, the house and senate is to select one man, and he shall be the chairman of the highway commission. Later the Governor is to nominate six other men, and from them the house and senate are to name the two other members of the highway commission. If the general assembly does not agree on any two of the first six names sent in by Governor Brandon, then the Governor is to nominate six other men, from which number the highway commission is to be completed.

The house conferees will content for these last provisions, while, as understood it, the senate conferees will advocate the selection of three men by the Governor, who shall constitute the state highway commission.

Mr. Patterson stated that he read the interview in the Daily Saturday from Col. Cyrus W. Ashcraft and that what the Lauderdale County representative had to say about the termination of the controversy over port amendment enabling act, expressed his sentiments exactly. Mr. Patterson said he believed the success of the movement to erect great ocean docks at Mobile, would immortalize the administration of Governor Brandon.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 17.—Governor Brandon will meet the members of the state board of convict supervisors this afternoon in connection with the mutiny of convict miners at Banner mines, near Birmingham last week. A statement will be given out concerning the situation, following the conference, the Governor said this morning.

A partial report has been given Governor Brandon by the convict department, but its contents were withheld, pending the session this afternoon.

At the mine today it was stated that all men were at work and that the slight damage to the machinery had been repaired.

BIRMINGHAM MAN SHOT BY ROBBERS

(Associated Press.)
ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 17.—A man shot down on Third street, just off fashionable Peachtree, here last night by negro highwaymen, was positively identified today as Lawrence Hamilton. Very little additional information about the man was available to police, however, letters on his person and other information gathered by the local authorities indicating that he had formerly been an oil broker in Texas and had a sister residing at 1309 Ina street, Birmingham, Ala.

Hamilton was shot down at the entrance to an alley. A few minutes before he had stopped in a soft drink stand and told the proprietor he had better watch for robbers as there were two negroes lurking in this vicinity. Police wondered why, with this information, he went out to meet his death.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 17.—Lawrence Hamilton, slain in Atlanta last night was the son of F. H. Hamilton, Birmingham furniture dealer. He had lived in Atlanta a year, his relatives here said. Prior to that time he had lived in several places north and east. His family could not ascribe any motive for the killing other than robbery from the reports received from the police department of Atlanta.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AS SCHOOLS OPEN

Same Quarters Used By The Students As Year

LARGE FACULTY USED THIS TERM

New High Schools Are Not Yet Ready For Occupancy

With the two new high school buildings as yet not ready for use, the city schools opened this morning in the same quarters occupied last year. It was found necessary at a preliminary meeting of the superintendent and faculty held late Saturday afternoon that for the time being division of the fifth and sixth grade actually taught at the Gordon school, to be sent to the Ninth street school in South Decatur.

Rev. T. G. Mundy, Rector of St. Johns Episcopal Church, told the school authorities they could have the use of three rooms at the Parish house on Gordon Drive near the high school on that thoroughfare, and the offer was gratefully received. The large school building on Lafayette street, proved to be over-crowded and many pupils were sent to the small residence school building near, which was used last year for the same purpose.

It has been decided that seventy per cent average be attained by all students of the public schools before they will be graduated to the grades above.

Superintendent Benson announced there were some twenty odd new teachers in the schools this year not in addition to those who served last year, but who took the places of teachers who sought employment elsewhere.

C. P. Baker, a graduate of the University of Georgia, has lately joined the corps of teachers stated Mr. Benson.

At the meeting Saturday, which was held at the Gordon school building about sixty five teachers were present from the several schools throughout the city. A number of short talks were made on plans for the year, by Superintendent Benson and others. L. H. Duych, who in addition to teaching science, will be the athletic director and coach of the football team spoke enthusiastically of the prospects of a strong football team.

The attendance at the opening this morning was expected but the exact number of students to matriculate was not available at noon time.

All the several schools held special opening exercises, the most largely attended being those at the two high school buildings.

At the high school on Lafayette street, the newly appointed principal G. S. Turney, presided, and at the high school on Gordon drive, P. D. Scribner, the principal presided.

The high school chorus was sung as the opening number at this school with Miss Earline Johnson at the piano, followed by the devotional exercises which were led by Dr. T. G. Harris, pastor of the Central Methodist church.

A vocal solo by Mrs. J. M. Petty followed the prayer of Dr. Harris, then Miss Gladys Barnard, gave a reading Mr. Scribner then announced that Superintendent W. W. Benson would deliver an address.

Mr. Benson stated that while the school system was not as large as the one of the city of Birmingham, that the understanding was it was to be "a better one." This speaker announced that the high school where he was

Ward Goes To Trial On Murder Charge

Here is a late photograph of Walter S. Ward, millionaire baker, of New York, who has been placed on trial in White Plains, N. Y., on the charge of murdering Clarence Peters, a former Marine, whom Ward says he shot to death to foil a blackmail plot. Ward's wife, Mrs. Henri Ward, will probably take the stand for her husband.

FUNERAL IS HELD FOR T. B. POTTER

The funeral services for the late T. B. Potter, who died from an attack of acute indigestion Saturday night at his home in East Decatur were held at the Vaughn Cemetery at Hillsboro this morning with interment there.

A large number of the many friends of the deceased attended the funeral services, which were conducted by Rev. J. H. Hill, a former pastor of Mr. Potter.

Some years ago Mr. Potter, who for a long time was an employee of the Louisville and Nashville shops here suffered a stroke of paralysis, since which time he has been able to get about with great difficulty.

For the past few years he sold merchandise of different kinds on the principal streets.

In all his relations in life Mr. Potter was regarded as faithful and honest. He numbered hundreds of people here among his friends, and in the First Christian church of which he was a member he was regarded with great affection.

Mr. Potter was active in the work of the church and took a lively interest in divine worship.

Many who knew the deceased in life testify to the belief that Mr. Potter was an example of the Bible truth that "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor than silver and gold." The deceased had no living children and is survived by his wife.

WALTON ATTENDS LABOR MEETING

Small Part Of State Will Be Affected By Troop Rule

(By Associated Press.)
OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 17.—The Oklahoma City police department, taken over by the military late yesterday, was returned to civil authorities today when Mayor Cordell served notice on Colonel W. B. Ray, military commander in charge of the city, that unless Ray Frasier, chief of police, was reinstated at once, the entire police force would retire from the city and the task of policing the metropolis would be left in the hands of the military.

Governor Walton today arrived unexpectedly in Henryetta, where the state convention of labor is in session. Statements emanating from his residence here last night were to the effect he would remain in Oklahoma City.

In the absence of official statement from Adjutant General Marshall observers here were inclined today to more strongly believe that a very small part of the state would actually feel the pressure of the military.

The fact that less than 500 troops are mobilized out of the 10,000 of the National guard, leads to the belief Governor plans to prevent the agitation of the labor situation and the state convention of labor is in session. Statements emanating from his residence here last night were to the effect he would remain in Oklahoma City.

NEW OFFENSIVE IS PLANNED BY RIVERA

(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, Sept. 17.—A new offensive in Morocco is planned by General Rivera, president of the military dictatorship of Spain. The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Express quotes the head of the new government as follows:

"We are sending General Alamo to Morocco with orders to settle the whole problem there. We will respect our treaties with Raisul, but will make no treaty with Abd-el-Krim and will launch a new offensive in the Mebilla zone, in accordance with the plans of the general staff."

It is stated in Madrid, the correspondent adds, that the great offensive in Morocco probably will begin within a week with 150,000 troops in action.

Rivera disclaimed any intention of governing without parliament saying he would form another which would be truly representative of Spain.

THE DECATUR DAILY
SOUNDS SO MUCH BETTER.

It is now Decatur, Alabama, if you please and also The Decatur Daily, the first copy less the hyphenated name arrived this morning under a Tuesday date line. It was 3:35 o'clock yesterday afternoon when Gov. William W. Brandon signed the Albany-Decatur merger bill throwing those two prosperous towns into one great big city. Immediately thereafter commissioners for the consolidated towns were sworn in. The Albany-Decatur Daily dropped its hyphenated name, remained at the same place but changed from Albany to Decatur as the point of publication and in every way the city of 13,000 people down here on the banks of the pearl paved Tennessee starts out today as one community, one people, one interest, one effort pulling together and everybody to the interests and upbuilding of Decatur, Alabama. Our added congratulations, people of Decatur and best wishes for your greatest possible development.—Huntsville Times.

A GREAT REPORTER.

James M. Tuohy, London correspondent of the New York World, is dead.

For more than a quarter of a century the foreign dispatches of James M. Tuohy have been pen pictures of conditions abroad, and whether it were the coronation of a king or the analysis of an intricate political or economic situation his articles were newspaper classics.

In his capacity of reporter—for reporter he was—he had the confidence of more European statesmen, perhaps, than did the representative of any other American newspaper.

He described two coronations for his American readers—Edward VII and George V. His descriptions of Ireland in the throes of revolution; his discussion of state and economic problems, that affected not only Europe but the entire world, revealed a knowledge far beyond that of the average foreign correspondent, and won for him the right to sign his dispatches far beyond the power of any editor to withdraw it.

He was one of very few reporters to whom the "by-line" of the profession came by right rather than by editorial favor.

Mr. Tuohy was born in Ireland in 1859 and in 1888 he went to the World Bureau in London. In 1897 he was made chief of the European Bureau with headquarters in London, and until illness struck him down a few months ago, he continued to occupy that post. His two sons saw service on every front in the World War and the younger is now a member of the staff over which his father presided.

The newspaper profession loses a rare associate in his death, but the loss to the public is the greater—for there was only one James H. Tuohy—Nashville Tennessean.

FARMING BECOMING A LESS INDEPENDENT OCCUPATION.

With the coming of what are termed "modern conditions," every individual and every class of individuals becomes less and less independent. One of the last classes to be forced to yield in the matter of independence is that of the farmers. They cannot hope to succeed now days unless they recognize their dependence upon the rest of the country. Take this idea in connection with marketing only. The farmer must under modern conditions, not only plant the seed, cultivate his crop and house his crop in the fall, but he must provide ways and means for getting what he produces sold to the consumers. The time was when all farmers attempted to do was to make good crops, and then the other fellow did the rest. It was under such conditions that the farming class became to be known as "the most independent people in the world." It may be true that farmers are still more independent than that other people, but more and more they have had to give up their independence and seek how best they can serve the whole community. It was when it was recognized that farmers must diversify their crops, that the beginning of the end of the "independence" of the farmers came. A recent statement from the United States Department of Agriculture will prove of interest in this connection, a part of which is as follows:

"In the South probably the most frequent question is whether it would not be to the advantage of that section to diversify on cotton. In the Far West farmers are asking whether they can continue with profit the production of vegetables for Eastern cities, at least on the scale recently prevailing, in the view of great increase in transportation costs. New England farmers are considering whether, in view of the present high price of land in the Middle West and the high freight differential in their favor, they cannot again produce the major portion of the feed they now buy from the other sections. Idaho farmers, who this year are unable to sell their big potato crop, are considering abandoning potato culture. The temporary depression in the price of tobacco recently led many farmers to abandon this crop or to reduce their acreage of it."

A kind of blind logic has controlled farmers as well as other business people. They reasoned that if a crop sold well one year, it would sell well the next, so consequently year after year more and more of crops that had been successful were planted until the market for them was destroyed. Too little attention has been given to the probable demand of certain of the larger crops. In a word, farmers as well as other people have not realized that "change is the law of life." They have not realized that one penalty for belonging to the human race, is to be compelled to be always seeking new ways and new means in order to meet the new ends to be sought with the passing years.

New York
Letter

by Lucy Jeanne Price

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—One of the most intriguing festivities that this cosmopolitan city has enjoyed in a long time was the Feast of the Heavenly River or Adoration of the Milky Way which made Chinatown the Mecca of young Chinese women living in this part of the country. In perpetuates the legend in Chinese mythology of Jao Noy, the knitting spinster, who once dwelt on the west bank of the river and whose skill and industry all Chinese girls are instructed to emulate. In China the feast is public, girls assembling to display products of their skill with knitting needles. Chinese expatriates in the United States have modified the custom in that it has become an occasion for meetings in the homes of representatives Chinese, Mott, Doyer and Pell streets were gay with lanterns and colored streamers where these gatherings were held. In keeping with tradition, all exhibitors remained anonymous the marriageable youths seeking to establish their identity.

Health is certainly the center of our concentration these days. It seemed to have wrested its share of consideration when our magazines began publishing long treatises on diet and exercise and bulwarks against all kinds of hitherto unnoticed germs. But it hasn't stopped with human beings. Dickey, a canary bird belonging to Halver Jacobson, 121 Riverside drive, was feeling indisposed, so Mr. and Mrs. Jacobson took him to Europe for his health. The returned this week with the news that Dickey is much improved.

It is still a world of peace and beauty when musicians turn again to the harp. I had almost forgotten what an exquisite medium of tone that picturesque instrument can be when Carlos Salzedo revived New York's interest in it last season. Now its place in the music world has been given authoritative recognition by our Institute of Musical Art, which has obtained the services of Mr. Salzedo to organize a special department for the training of harpists. It was probably because it gave such an accepted opportunity for beautiful girls to look their loveliest that the real possibilities of the harp in the hands of a master escaped most of us for a generation or two. It is a worthwhile undertaking to show them once again.

We get our real ideas of magnificence from the smaller cities after all. When Charles D. Thoms, a young Rochester (N. Y.) banker, was arrested here the other night during an altercation over a taxi change, he displayed a glinting revolver, which the policeman promptly appropriated for the time being. Back at the police station, it was discovered that the automatic was truly gold-plated and the gilded chamber contained gold-plated bullets, worth easily ten dollars a shot.

If civilization means the adaption of oneself to the environment, the most civilized man I ever came across lives in a small room down on crowded West Third street. Several years ago he lost his right leg. Misfortune? I should say not. All that a real leg is good for is to walk with. While a wooden leg. This particularly civilized man finds it of amazing usefulness. Day times it takes him around the city. At night, it holds up his window to let in the air. He uses it for a fly swatter, and the other night he hit a burglar over the head with it and scared him nearly to death.

An elephant, even a very young one, seems a cumbersome object to start housekeeping with. But Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Strong are going to set up their honeymoon home with such a pet as part of the family circle, as soon as they return from a wedding trip in Europe. The elephant is five years old a babe as elephants go, and was presented to the bride by her father, who is the head of an animal importing firm. The elephant has been trained to be quite useful around the house, besides entertaining and Mr. Ruhe, the donor, said he figured his gift was more valuable than diamonds and far more substantial than parlor furniture.

But no one need worry about their time being idly spent. While there are fifteen prizes, and one devotee much of his spare time to securing votes and subscriptions he is assured to win one of the prizes, yet The Daily has gone much farther than that, and has made arrangements that everyone who takes part in the campaign will win something or secure a price for commission check at the end of his campaign. The ten per cent in cash that will be paid to each person who takes part in the campaign and who does not win one of the regular prizes can easily be made into a good substantial additional income during the ten weeks that the campaign will last. For just ten weeks, including today is the life of the campaign.

One married lady who entered the campaign today said that she was planning a vacation for herself next summer, that she wanted to spend two whole weeks at Atlantic City, and that she was starting early to plan for it. She said that whatever prize she would win in the campaign, she had figured out exactly to fit into those plans. If she wins an automobile she will drive to the resort, and if she wins a cash prize or commission, then she will add that to her savings for the trip. Not bad idea, and her plans are certainly well laid. We wish her success.

She stated further that if she won one of the merchandise prizes she would add it to her wardrobe. Another young lady who entered had been recently married, and her brand new husband were to tent upon building themselves a home of their own. She said they had got into this campaign intent upon winning one of the top prizes. If they win a car they will sell it and use the money as a first payment on their home. More prizes to them.

No matter who you are or when you live, or what you do—you have some pet ambition—something that you want to accomplish during the coming year. It will take lots of energy and lots of pep to accomplish that without a doubt, for everything worth while in this world requires some extra thinking and some extra effort. The best way in the world to start this pet ambition is to enter this campaign and use your spare time acquiring one of the valuable prizes. If you win an auto and already have one, sell it and use the money. You can go wrong in this contest. There is nothing to lose. Your spare time will win you whatever there is on the list that you want. Use a little common sense on yourself—you are getting more ambitious day by day, in every way you are getting more ambitious—and then when you get started in the campaign, "day by day, in every way, you are getting higher and higher" on the list, nearer and nearer to top prize. Surprising how that little Couesim will fire one's ambition. It will see. Then send in your name if it is not on the list.

The Story of Mollie Mrs. Marks Told Madge.

DICKY often laughingly has accused me of having a card index mind. I was inclined to believe his statement when I noticed the embarrassment of my apartment neighbor, Mrs. Marks, at my idle query as to the occupation of her friend Mollie, whose parties she had been singing. For at her answer that the girl was a bookkeeper in a fur house, I drew from my mental file, two other queer notes, and compared them with this one, which had just come under my notice.

"At our first meeting with Mollie and her wife, I had noticed the gorgeous fur wrap of real seal trimmed with mink which the woman wore. She had called my attention to it with childish enthusiasm and began a sentence: 'You see my husband is in the —' only to have it chopped short with a curl warning sound from her husband. And a couple later in the hall, as we were passing the door, I saw Mollie's husband, a man, looking at her with a queer expression on his face, as if he were about to say 'my husband's fur house' when she had turned away, leaving me with a puzzled expression on my face, as if I had been told something that was not to be repeated."

What did it all mean? Why should the woman who had been singing the songs of love, whose personality was as repulsive to me as his wife's was regularly attractive, desire to conceal his ownership of or employment in a respectable and honorable business? Why should —

The Way They Met.
I bought myself up with a round turn. It was no business of mine, I assured myself, but I was curious to know what the girl was doing, and I was sure that I had seen her somewhere. I had a queer little presentiment that some time I might meet her.

I felt myself, however, that Mrs. Marks had no shadow of an idea I had noticed either her fur cloak in her closet or her slip in her dressing room. With a light little laugh, I made a casual comment: "Bookkeeping is a dull job for a girl as pretty as you say your friend is."

"You've said it!" Mrs. Marks repeated with emphasis. "If I had her face and figure, you couldn't see her for the dust. I'd be kicking up my way to Hollywood. But Mollie's queer, as I told you, and I've got up trying to make her out. I think an awful lot of the kid, though. I used to wheel her around when she was a baby. Her folks lived in the next flat to ours, but the rooms wasn't anything like these, I'll tell the cock-eyed world. They was a fierce proposition. But we used to have good times down on that old street. Poor Mollie!"

As she talked she had been busy with her setting out cups and saucers, plates and flat silver for two on the table which occupied the place of honor in the center of the room, and which was covered with the most ornate piece of embroidery I ever had seen in my life. It was a color of the rainbow quilted in the intricate stitches. I did not detect it while its flora would have made a botanist tear his hair. Mrs. Marks saw me gazing at it in a puzzled awe which she mistook for admiration.

"That's Mollie's Ring Now," she said, a bit shyly. "I remember Mollie was a little bit of a thing then, and she used to sit by me and hold the embroidery silks for me as quiet as a little mouse. How proud her poor mother was of her!"

She sighed prodigiously, and I knew that I was expected to aid with a question, the reminiscence which she was so patently enjoying. "Your friend has lost her mother?" I asked.

"Not only her mother, but every bit of with and kin belonging to her, except some cousins in the old country that have done her out of the little bit of property she's entitled to over there. There was a fire in the flat one day when Mollie was away at school, and when she came home they was all gone, mother, brother and two sisters."

"Her father had died two years before, so the poor kid was all alone, except for my mother and me," she went on. "I can feel her little body shiver yet. I held her in my arms all that night, and she never shed a tear, just shook all night as if she was racked in ice. And she never forgotten it. She'd stick to me till the hot place froze over, Mollie would."

She was frankly fussy over her reminiscences, while I was conscious of a keen curiosity to see the girl with go tragic a history, and so engaging a person and personality as Mrs. Marks had described. And when the old partner bell sounded four alternate long and short rings, Mrs. Marks—her face alight—rushed to the parlour door in the hall.

"That's Mollie's ring now," she said. "I don't like it."

THE ENCHANTED WOODS : By Juanita Hamel

In every heart there is a place where romance dwells with dreams, and just a little is required to let those dreams leap free and seem to be reality. Within a woods—a little forest place where silence reigns—her heart is opened wide by some chance phrase she reads, and standing by her side she sees a knight of old, in armor bright, come to pledge his love as once he pledged it in the long ago, upon this very spot—before this magic tree!

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Making Friends

WASHINGTON says that Mrs. Coolidge is going to be one of the most popular women who ever lived in the White House.

She's rather young and more than rather good looking. She wears smart clothes and good hats, and she seems to like to wear them, but most important of all, she likes people—all sorts of people, and of course that means that all sorts of people like her.

Whoever wrote "Mary and Her Little Lamb" expressed a very deep truth in that little verse. Don't you remember how the lamb followed Mary to school, and how the teacher tried to turn him out, and he wouldn't go, and when he finally had to go he lingered near—still?

"What makes the lamb love Mary so?" the eager children cried. "Why, Mary loves the lamb, you know," the teacher did reply. Now, the man or the woman who wrote that verse knew something about human nature, and lamb nature, too, I guess.

"Mary Loves the Lamb"

Give a modern psychologist such an example as that and he'd lecture about it for hours—use words of three syllables as frequently as possible and charge a good fat price for a set of season tickets to the lectures—and you'd go and take your best friend and sit awe-struck and silent. And on the way home you and the friend would tell each other how uplifted you felt and what a bright light the lecturer and the lecture had shed upon your inner consciousness, and you'd be very scientific and mysterious and esoteric, and all the time all the lecturer was saying was, "Why, Mary loves the lamb, you know," over and over in a hundred different ways.

It's the ancient story—if you would be loved, do a little loving yourself. No, it doesn't always hold good between man and woman; that's a different game—at least in the beginning.

Man is a hunter, and he doesn't want the lamb to come and eat out of his hand—at first. Not he!

He wants to take a gun or a bow and arrow or something equally primitive and chase the poor lamb from peak to peak and from lake to forest, and back again up and down the road, and the more frightened and determined to get away the lamb acts, the more fun the hunting is for the man.

That's before marriage. After marriage, ah, that's a different game.

Flake enough cold boiled halibut to make a full cupful and sprinkle it with the juice of half a large lemon, the juice of an onion, pepper, salt and two teaspoonfuls of Worcester's shire sauce. Fold the fish into a cupful of rich cream sauce, and three-quarters of a cupful of soft bread crumbs and fold in the stiffly-beaten white of an egg. Butter a baking dish or ramekin dishes well, and fill lightly with the mixture. Bake a few of the soft crumbs to put over the top, dotting it with a little bit of butter. Bake from ten to twelve minutes in a medium oven. Make sure the soufflé is a delicate brown on top. Serve it with a good tart Skate Soup.

Select a medium-sized fish or the "wings" of a big fish. Wash and scrape it well, then cover it with about two quarts of cold water. Add a large, sliced onion, a sliced carrot, a few celery tops cut fine, half a bay leaf, a minced half pepper and a little chopped parsley; pepper, salt, a tablespoonful of Worcester's shire sauce and a tablespoonful of curry powder. Let this mixture simmer gently for one hour, then strain it and turn it into a fresh saucepan. Pick out a few slices of carrot and add them to the soup with a teaspoonful of freshly-minced parsley, and a small cupful of hot cream. Serve this soup with toasted dice scattered over the top. Pick out all the fish and free it from the skin and bones. Flake it and it will be ready for a salad that will be like a crabmeat salad in flavor. Or it may be creamed on toast or made into a ramekin dish.

YOUR HEALTH

What You Should Know About Causes of Pneumonia

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

EVERYBODY is afraid of pneumonia. Everybody shuddered on hearing that President Harding had pneumonia. Because it is so frequently fatal, no wonder it is considered such a dreaded disease. In every city and in every community pneumonia is one of the chief causes of death.

Not only is pneumonia a terrible disease because of what it does directly, but it is an ailment which has sneaky and uncertain habits. It searches out weak places in the body and makes its attacks there, as well as in the lungs where it originates. It prepares the way for the growth of the germs of dreaded consumption. It goes to the ear, the mastoid and the brain. One type is called "creeping pneumonia," and which is numbered among the acute infectious diseases is lobar pneumonia, sometimes called "lung fever." In this type there is inflammation of the substance of the lung, the vital air cell portion. At first it is inflamed and engorged, but air continues to enter the cells. There are fever, hurried breathing, pain in the chest and cough.

In the second stage, the lung becomes solid. The tissues have consolidated and no air enters the involved part. At this period the lung is like a piece of red liver. In the third and last stage, the lung tissues become gray in color. The air cells are filled with exudate and the lung is useless. The patient suffers exactly as he would if a part of the lungs were flooded with water. There is struggling for air and great suffering.

This description gives you an idea of what happens in lobar pneumonia. It usually begins with a chill. Fever follows and continues for a week or ten days. Then the crisis appears, with abrupt drop in the temperature and gradual recovery. Broncho-pneumonia is quite a different thing. It is not a primary disease like the lobar type. In the great majority of cases it is secondary to some other trouble.

Any disease which has catarrhal symptoms of the nose and throat may extend to the bronchial tubes and ultimately reach the smaller bronchi. But broncho-pneumonia stops here, not involving the air cells and lung tissue proper, as lobar pneumonia does.

Measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever, diphtheria, and particularly influenza, are among the conditions which may lead to broncho-pneumonia. More surely pneumonia follows influenza, like the pneumonia poisoning Mr. Harding had, may have broncho-pneumonia as a complication.

No matter what its form may be, pneumonia is a serious ailment. It demands immediate medical attention and watchful care throughout the attack.

Answers to Health Questions.
MISS L. M. C. Q.—Will you kindly tell me what causes dark circles under the eyes?
A.—They may be caused by loss of sleep, constipation, eyestrain or indigestion. If you will send a self-addressed, stamped envelope, stating your question, full particulars on the treatment of constipation and indigestion will be given.

H. O. C. Q.—Will you kindly tell me what causes the thyroid gland to become enlarged? What trouble or illness may develop from neglect of this condition?
A.—Strain, worry, overwork or toxemia may cause an enlarged thyroid gland. If neglected, it will finger-tips, toning the muscles and inducing them to bring back to your chin the firmness that is identified with youth.

But most important of all, you must never flag in your determination always to hold your chin high. This affects your whole attitude on life, and it's remarkable in its effect upon your carriage and general appearance. By holding your chin high, I don't mean holding it out so that it protrudes and you follow it when you walk, but I mean high and well in, so that your head is erect upon your shoulders, and your walk is graceful. This helps wonderfully to give you the feeling as well as the appearance of youth and of joy in being alive.

Tomorrow's Horoscope
By Genevieve Kemble
TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18.
Mars governs this day under fortunate lunar transit. This, say the seers, assures stirring events, with the faculties and energies under high stimulus, inducing to large and aggressive measures. Yet there may be need for conservatism in the handling of money and there should be unusual precaution in the signing of all papers or contracts. There may be annoyance through treachery.

Those whose birthday it is may expect an active and successful year, in which the disposition may be bold and adventurous. Money should be safeguarded and all writings carefully signed. A child born on this day will be quick, enterprising and persevering, but should be schooled in the importance of reliability and straightforwardness.

This Frock of Beige Wool Crepe Achieves a Note of Difference Through Its New Use of Plaits.

THOUGH plaits have come to be unusual, they are ever smarter than ever. One of the interesting features about the use of plaits is that you always introduce variations.

For instance, here's a beige wool crepe costume that uses plaits of the usual narrow variety. But it achieves a note of difference by leaving one section plain. This makes an effective panel, twelve inches or wider, at the left side.

Wool-crepe is satisfactory material because it wears well and is light in weight. The same costume will be charming in navy costume.

Limestone's first bale of cotton was brought to Athens last Wednesday morning by Robert Andrews of the southeastern part of the county. Mr. Andrews brought the first bale of cotton to Athens last year on August 30th. The first bale this year was ginned by Lermion and Co. of Athens and sold to O. D. Dodd and company for 30c. The bale weighed 546 pounds and brought $163.80.

Much preparation is being made for a county fair for Limestone and Athens this year. The dates are September 26, 27, and 28. One of the main features of the products of the county will be the Poultry show. A large tent has been secured for this display and it is thought now that the poultry presented at this fair will be equal to most any display in the state fairs. There has been much interest in this county in poultry for more than two years, and it has become a very profitable industry for the county.

Letting in the Light.
Books are like the windows of a great tower. They let light in. Every life is a growing tower. It is put up stone by stone. The higher it grows, the darker it gets if we do not put in a window here or there to give light. That is what a book does for life. It lets light into that life. Some lives are so dark that the folks who live them grope up the winding stairs, dust covered and gloomy, because there are no windows and consequently there is no light.

SOUTHERN HAS EXHIBIT

AT BIG CHEMICAL SHOW

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Mineral resources of the south are displayed to great advantage by the exhibit of the Southern Railway system at the ninth National Exhibition of Chemical Industries which opened at the Grand Central Palace in New York on September 17th.

Attending the exposition are men from all over the country interested in all branches of chemical and mineral industries. The Southern's exhibit gives them a comprehensive view of the great variety of raw materials to be found in the south and the opportunities for the location of a wide range of industries using these materials.

The exhibit occupies four booths three of which are combined in one for the exhibit proper, while the fourth is used as an office. It is so arranged that visitors who are interested in any particular class of materials find all the samples of that class grouped facilitating study and comparison.

While the Southern has made exhibits at each annual chemical exposition for several years, this is declared to be the most elaborate exhibit it has ever made and it is expected that a number of important industries will be attracted to the south as a result.

Correcting Wrong Impression.

Not a Bad Description.
A new neighbor came to call on me, and she brought her small four-year-old boy. This child was a striking child with red hair. More Grip on the Road!

Buick Four-wheel Brakes

Buick four-wheel brakes give all 1924 Buick cars twice the amount of grip on the road, thereby doubling their braking efficiency. It is the friction or grip of the tire on the road surface that brakes or slows down the car.

Buick four-wheel brakes not only provide a greater power to stop in case of emergency but, because of this four-wheel road grip, reduce skidding dangers to a minimum.

In turning, Buick four-wheel brake construction automatically releases whichever is the outside or guiding front wheel so it is instantly responsive to the steering mechanism.

Buick four-wheel brake construction distributes braking friction over four drums and four wheels. This reduces wear on brake linings and tires, thereby assuring their longer life and greater efficiency, with fewer adjustments.

Buick four-wheel brakes [on all models] together with countless other distinctive features of the 1924 cars further establish Buick as the Standard of Comparison.

CIVIL DOCKET IS SOUNDED BY JUDGE

The civil term of Judge Horton's court opened at the court house this morning at 8:30 o'clock. For an hour and a half the time of the court was taken up with sounding out the docket. Very few people attended the morning session of the court. None but civil cases are due to be heard during the remainder of the time Judge Horton will reside over the circuit court here although it was stated at the court house that the judge may make some disposition of the cases now in his court against the Moss brothers and J. D. Hardy.

In case Judge Horton does not order any action in connection with the trial of these three men, their cases are expected to come up at the November term of the circuit courts criminal division.

CASHIER GONE AS PROBE CONTINUES

(Associated Press)
FORT SMITH, Ark., Sept. 17.—Efforts were being made today to clear up the mystery in connection with the disappearance Thursday of B. H. Sorrells, for 17 years cashier of the People's Bank of Mansfield, and who for a time, was believed to have been accidentally locked in the strong room of the bank.

According to a dispatch received here today, safe experts forced the lock of the strong room yesterday but found no trace of Sorrells. Inspection of the records of the bank, underway at the time of the disappearance, has shown his accounts to be in good shape and his funds intact.

EXEMPTION BILL IS BEFORE SOLONS

(By Associated Press.)
MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 17.—Whether the rules committee of the house will make the Powell textile exemption bill a special order or leave it on the regular calendar which will mean its enactment, or defeat, according to legislators spending the week end in the capital.

With the senate having passed the measure providing for three year exemption of textile industries located in Alabama, with a capital of $50,000 or more the bill must be made a special order of the house to get before them for passage during the remaining five legislative days it is pointed out by political observers.

Reconvening tomorrow, the legislature faces a week of consideration of appropriation bills, including amongst them the workmen's compensation measure.

Something New At The Fair By J. C. FORD, County Agent

The production contest between milk cows, to be put on at the county fair, is new to this section of the country. In my judgment it will be one of the best features of the entire fair. The fair management and business interests have thought well enough of it to offer an attractive premium list of $25, $20, $15, 10 and $5.00.

In this contest, each cow that enters will have her milk weighed and tested for butterfat for six consecutive milkings, and the prizes will be awarded on the basis of milk and butterfat production. It simply puts a cow down to her rock principles, to stand or fall according to her ability to produce. If you have the best cow you know of, one that you think will produce a pound or more of butterfat per day enter her in this contest and show the other fellow up.

Bible Class Will Attend Revival

The early Sunday morning Bible Class, which meets at the R. R. Y. M. C. A., will attend the Ham-Ramsay revival meeting in a body Friday night, when the class hopes to line up five hundred men and march to the tent on Fourth avenue.

Over a hundred, variously estimated from 120 to 130 men attended the meeting of this class Sunday morning when Evangelist H. M. Ham made the principal address.

This class had been divided into two divisions for the purpose of conducting a membership campaign, during which effort it is hoped five hundred men can be enrolled in the class. The leader of one division is Mr. Johnson, and the leader of the other Mr. Schook.

Services Winning Many For Christ

things before God?

The fourth thing we shall impress upon you about the judgment is that among the questions asked you on that day will be "What have you done with Jesus?" Many men since the days of Judas have sold out their Lord for money, others for pleasure, others for popularity, others for social position.

There stands Jesus at the right hand of God. He sits upon the great white throne and before Him stand all the nations of the earth.

I imagine that the first person assigned before the awful Judge will be Judas, the traitor.

His first coming was indeed as a sacrificial lamb. His second coming is to be as the Lion of the Tribe of Judah.

Next come old Annas and Caiaphas, the hypocritical old ecclesiastic bigots who were shocked by the blasphemy of Jesus calling himself the Son of God; just as some of you profess to be shocked at my plain speech when I reate of your sins. You had better be shocked by your sins rather than by characterization of them, you old hypocrites. Nothing short of a shock will wake you up from your sleep of death. Jesus never minced words when he preached to sinners, and he was harder on the church members (the Pharisees) than in any other class. John the Baptist lost his head by plain preaching to the king on his throne.

Third, comes Pilate, the cowardly rimmer who, after finding Jesus innocent, delivered Him up to be crucified; hypocritically washing his own hands in a basin to cleanse them of his blood.

After Pilate, the man who spat upon Jesus and smote Him in the mouth and mocked Him, were each passed in review in words and actions that almost made one's flesh crawl.

Behind these come those who have in this meeting and in other meetings where the gospel has been preached to them and Christ has been offered, so often rejected Him—one because he was afraid he couldn't hold out another because he hadn't the courage to face imaginary ridicule till others because they could not give up dancing or booze, or adultery or other begetting sin.

Then come the harlot, the gambler, the saloon keeper, the murderer and the unbelievers. This last class may include men who posed as the top of the heap down here—lawyers, doctors, professors. Then alongside of you will stand the fornicators and the liars up God will deal with you over nice "honest" people just as He does with the most diabolical reprobate that walks your streets tonight. He is no respecter of persons. The most beautiful girl in this audience may go to hell with an unkind on one side and a murderer on the other. And just one lie makes you a liar. If one liar should pass through the gates of Paradise the devil could tear down the throne of God.

Every Godless man who has married a Christian woman will have to answer at the judgment for having neutralized her Christian influence with her children, his children. She has bared her feet in the waters of death to bring your children into the world, and now you throw upon her the entire burden of so teaching and training them as to save them from hell. You not only give her no help but you actually hinder her. You will find no sympathy in hell; but on the contrary the children who follow you there will blame you for their salvation.

Ample Pardon Offered In Advance.

He that believeth on Me hath eternal life, says Jesus. There is therefore no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, says Paul. And the only thing this inestimable boon costs is repentance, confession and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is so freely offered that any person who fails to go away from this place tonight with the penalties of the judgment still hanging over their heads can blame nobody but themselves if they have to spend an eternity in hell.

We are in position now to wait on the ladies any time, as we have a screen to put around the chairs to make it more private, give us a trial, if we don't please you, your work free.
